AS A COTTON MARKET.

SOME FACTS IN REGARD TO THE PLEECY STAPLE AND THE PORT AS A MARKET THEREFOR.

Last year Fort Worth handled close on to 15,000 bales of cotton. This year the chances are that her buyers will gather in chances are that her buyers will gained at least 25,000 bales. This is a big increase, but there are good reasons for believing it not an extravagant estimate. In the first place the yield per acre, taking the whole country over, is as great it not be first place the yield per acre, taking the whole country over, is as great if not be first place the place that th

Again, the acresge devoted to cotton must be at least 15 per cent, more than for 1885 in the country tributary to Fort Worth. The Farmers' alliance, too, hav-ing established their yards here, will probably bring in 10,000 bales as offerings from the various branches of that order. It will be remembered that the alliances that brought their bales to this city the satisfaction, and no cotton hauled in by them was ever taken out on account of a disagreement as to prices or for any other The buyers located at this point always paid the highest figures, a fact which pro-ducers were not slow to find out.

> A pleasant chat ensued relative to the great Southern product. Said be: "While the drought has again out short the yield in Texas, it will more than hold good its relative position and still heads the list as the largest producing state. In Mississippi, Georgia, the Carolinas and Alabama the crop will be very short as they had too much rain while we failed to get enough. I think Texas may be counted on for 1,250,000 bales this season, an increase over last year, due more to a bigger average than an increase over last year, due more to a bigger acreage than an increased yield per acre." "The market seems to be opening up at pretty low figures. Do you look for any improvement?"

"I think there is a good prospect for better values," responded Mr. Philips. "The entire crop of the South will be New York or Liverpool. The best sign, though, is in the fact that cotton goods are advancing. This, as a rule, fore-shadows a rise in price. With a healthy inquiry and manufactories running full time corresponds time overywhere, combined with the other facts given above, there is every reason to think that cotton will go up, and that at no distant day."

tween the West and the East, but we have r cently been made aware of an arrange-ment which puts entirely in the shade the time heretofore made from St. Louis to New York. The Vandalia Line, in con-nection with the Pennsylvania railroad, has so arranged its schedule that the run from St. Louis to New York city is made in thirty-four hours and a half, or nearly five hours quicker than the old time. This line is by far the shortest between the points named (over one hundred miles shorter than its shortest competitor), which shows the run to be made in this time at a perfectly safe rate of speed. The track and equipment have a worldwide reputation as being first-class in every particular. It is the only line running a through car from St. Louis to New York leaving St. Louis in the morning, and on the evening train a magnificent Oullman Palace Buffet car which runs through without changs. We have always found this line to be a pleasant one,
